

Former Kaiser and Crown Prince in Exile in Holland

THE ex-Kaiser is here seen out for a drive in the vicinity of Amerongen, Holland. His companion, whose face is hidden by the coachman, is his host, Count Wilhelm von Bentinck. The former Emperor fled to Holland Dec. 10, 1918, after a stormy scene with his generals and chief civil officers at the headquarters of the German High Command at Spa, Belgium. They assured him that they could no longer depend upon the loyalty of the army to his person and at length he yielded reluctantly to their arguments.

(© Underwood & Underwood.)

FORMER CROWN PRINCE FRIEDRICH WILHELM TALKING TO A FISHERMAN OF THE ISLAND OF WIERINGEN, HIS PLACE OF EXILE.

FALLEN German Emperor as he appeared when taking a walk with his host about the grounds of the castle of Amerongen, Holland. Since he sought refuge at that place the ex-Emperor has kept closely to the grounds of the castle and his chief diversion has been wood chopping, in which he is said to have become expert. His presence in Holland has been a source of considerable embarrassment to the Dutch Government and there has been a large amount of correspondence on the subject with the allied Governments.

(© Underwood & Underwood.)

THE EX-CROWN PRINCE OF GERMANY ON VESSEL BEARING HIM INTO EXILE IN THE ISLAND OF WIERINGEN. THIS PLACE IS A LITTLE ISLET IN THE ZUYDER ZEE, INHABITED MAINLY BY FISHER FOLK.

(© International Film Service.)